El Paso International Airport to Adjust Long-Term Parking Rates in March 2026

El Paso, Texas—El Paso International Airport (ELP) will implement a parking rate adjustment for long-term parking beginning March 1, 2026.

The daily rate for long-term parking will increase from $7.00 to $9.00 per day.

This adjustment was approved by El Paso City Council as part of the airport's FY2026 budget and was originally scheduled to take effect on September 1, 2025. However, the airport postponed implementation to ease the impact on the community during construction of the Short-Term Solar Covered Parking project and the end-of-year holiday travel rush.

The updated pricing reflects rising operational costs while allowing the airport to reinvest in parking facilities to enhance safety, infrastructure, reliability, and the overall passenger experience. Parking fees are a critical part of keeping the airport self-sustaining, meaning ELP does not operate using local tax dollars or the City's general fund. As an enterprise fund, the airport relies on revenue from services like parking to maintain and improve facilities without burdening taxpayers.

Even with the adjustment, ELP remains among the most affordable airports in Texas and comparable to other airports of similar size across the country.

"We're committed to providing a high-quality, convenient experience for our passengers," said Tony Nevarez, Airport Director. "This rate adjustment supports continued investment in airport infrastructure and services, ensuring we can meet the growing needs of our region."
